A GUIDE TO STREET VENDING IN NEW YORK CITY

There are more than 10,000 street vendors in New York City, and they play an iconic role in urban life. What could be more New York than a hot dog in Times Square or DVDs on Canal Street? Selling things from a table or cart might seem simple, but in New York it's hard — long hours for low pay in a confusing system of regulations. This is a guide to the complicated, and sometimes unfair, rules that govern street vending in New York City.

WAYS TO A BETTER VENDOR WORLD

In New York, street vending has always attracted ambitious, hard-working men and women with limited economic options. Successive waves of immigrants — Jewish and Italian in a previous era, now Chinese, Bangladeshi, Afghan, and Senegalese — have used vending to gain a foothold in their new country. Its low start-up costs, independence, and flexibility make vending a traditional first stop for small business entrepreneurs.

But vending isn't an easy way to get ahead. Throughout New York City's history, merchants resentful of "unfair" competition have joined forces with city officials concerned with congestion, modernization, and "quality of life" to bar vendors from streets and regulate them excessively. These complex and shifting laws force vendors back and forth across the border between the formal and informal economies, making it difficult for vendors to serve the public and make a decent and honest living.

Here are four basic ways the City can make vending laws work better for vendors, their customers, and everyone else.

1880s

Four Jewish peddlers set up pushcarts along Heister Street on the Lower East Side, leading to the first pushcart market in New York City. The main Italian market evolved on Grand Street in lower Manhattan and Padgy's Market in Hell's Kitchen served Irish immigrants.

1927

Between 10-15% of all produce sold in New York was sold in pushcart markets.

1939

New York City featured an exhibit in the World's Fair called "The Life and Death of a Pushcart."

1. LIFT THE CAPS

It's virtually impossible to get a vending license in New York City because of strict caps, or limits, placed on the number of vendors in the 1970s and '80s. The estimated wait for a general vending license is several decades. By setting the caps far below vendor supply and public demand, the City unintentionally creates a thriving and exploitative black market for permits and licenses. Legal vendors have to buy licenses from illegal middlemen at exorbitant prices. Other vendors are driven underground, where they're unlicensed and unregulated. To bring vendors into the legal mainstream, the City should raise the caps to realistic levels and crack down on the black market in licenses and permits.

MIXED ACTION TOWARDS A "NOBLE PROFESSION"

Mayor Edward Koch (1978-1989) said "peddling is a noble profession." He proposed a bill to open more streets to vending while restricting the number of vendors per block through a site lottery, but it didn't pass. While he didn't enforce increased street restrictions, he signed Local Law 50 in 1979, capping general vendor licenses at 853, the number of licenses at the time. It was the first hard cap in the city's history.

2. INCREASE STREET ACCESS

Vendors need foot traffic to survive, but waves of street restrictions have forced them further away from the areas of the city that can support them. Pressure from merchant associations in the 1970s and Business Improvement Districts (BIDs) in later decades led to widespread restrictions, and Mayor Rudolph Giuliani made street restrictions a centerpiece of his "quality of life" campaign. Even on open streets, complex rules make it difficult to vend legally. The City should review street closings according to set criteria and rescind restrictions not founded in legitimate concerns about safety and street congestion. It should also simplify time-of-day restrictions to make them easier for vendors to understand and follow.

LISTENING TO HIS INNER VENDOR

As a youth, Mayor David Dinkins (1990-1993) was an unlicensed vendor in Harlem. He proposed raising the license caps and increasing vending enforcement. After an attempt to ban vendors from 125th Street in 1993 led to large protests, the mayor refrained from further restrictions.

MOST RESTRICTED VENDING AREAS

HARLEM

MIDTOWN

FINANCIAL DISTRICT

MIDTOWN MAN

The first Midtown ban dates back to the Depression, when thousands of former bankers, brokers, and other jobless residents took to Midtown to sell the iconic 5-cent apple.

WHAT'S A BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT (BID)?

First formed in the 1980s, BIDs are groups of merchants and property owners that voluntarily pay additional taxes to fund services and public improvements in their neighborhoods — like sidewalk maintenance, security, and capital projects. Historically, the merchants and property owners who control BIDs have led the fight against street vendors, pressing city officials for caps and street restrictions, or simply placing planters and other obstructions to prevent vendors from operating on their streets.

3. REDUCE THE FINES (UPDATE: VICTORY!)

In 2013, after three years of intensive campaigning by SVP members, the City Council passed a law lowering the fines for street vendor violations to a maximum of $500. (The maximum had been $1000, set by former Mayor Michael Bloomberg.) The law also changed the way fines increase — vendors now only have to pay higher penalties for repeat violations. $500 is still a lot of money for a street vendor violation, but this success demonstrates the growing power of the vendor community and eases the burden on these small business owners.

SETBACKS AND STEPS FORWARD

Mayor Michael Bloomberg (2002-present) is responsible for increasing fines from $250 to $1,000 and for banning vending near the World Trade Center. He did, however, sign the GreenCarts bill in 2008 which grants specialized vending permits that allow vendors to sell fruit in low income neighborhoods. While limited in scope, it is the first increase in vending permits in decades.

4. REFORM ADMINISTRATION AND ENFORCEMENT

Vending regulation is a patchwork of policies from the last hundred years that vendors and police find hard to understand. The rulebook is a series of photocopied and unformatted excerpts from the city code — rough going, even for native English speakers. As a consequence, vendors who want to follow the rules get tickets for violations they don't understand, and police who want to enforce the rules give tickets for violations that don't exist. To increase compliance, the City should simplify vendor regulation and create a new rulebook that clearly explains the rules in English and a few of the many languages vendors speak.
